Rising Citations Boost Impact Factors for All Titles in Nutrition Science Collection Published by American Society for Nutrition

2016 citation growth places The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition in 4th percentile of Science Citation Index Expanded

Rockville, MD – June 27, 2017 – The American Society for Nutrition today announced year-over-year growth in Impact Factors for all Nutrition Science Collection journals. Increasing citations in 2016 placed The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition in the 4th percentile among all titles in the Science Citation Index Expanded, and continued ASN’s publishing leadership in the Nutrition and Dietetics category.

The 2016 Journal Citation Report by Clarivate Analytics scored The American Journal for Clinical Nutrition as the top-ranked primary research title in its category with an Impact factor of 6.93, placing it 384th among 8,830 journals ranked in the Science Citation Index Expanded. Advances in Nutrition, with an Impact Factor of 5.23, placed in the 7th percentile. The Journal of Nutrition’s Impact Factor of 4.15, placing it in the 11th percentile, represents a year-over-year increase of 11%.

“The continued growth and category leadership across all Nutrition Science Collection journals is a testament to the talent and vision of ASN’s editorial teams, our editorial boards, and our reviewers,” said Dr. Mary Ann Johnson, president of ASN. “As nutrition science research increasingly generates discoveries that reverberate beyond our community, The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition, Advances in Nutrition, The Journal of Nutrition, and Current Developments in Nutrition will become even more influential in developing a deeper understanding of their impact.”

Journal Citation Reports are published annually by Clarivate Analytics, formerly Thomson Reuters Intellectual Property and Science. Impact Factors measure the number of times a typical journal article is cited during the year.
